ABOUT THE WABASH VALLEY TRUST FOR HISTORIC PRESERVATION

Established in Lafayette, Indiana in 1973, the Wabash Valley Trust is a nonprofit organization dedicated to providing a unified effort to educate and encourage interest in the heritage and architecture in the Wabash Valley area. The Trust subscribes to preservation in the broadest sense, encompassing quality of life issues that affect the environment, urban districts, neighborhoods, and rural areas.

Just as the built environment did not evolve overnight, preservation planning takes long range vision. Not only is the Trust involved in current community issues, they work hard to influence the long range future of preservation in Lafayette, Indiana and the Wabash Valley area. The Trust have programs to educate residents on the importance of preservation, and they are building networks here in our community along with state and national leaders as they strive to preserve our quality of life.

ABOUT THE WELLS COMMUNITY CULTURAL CENTER & GALLERIES

This exhibition will be held in the Northwest Gallery at the Wells Community Cultural Center, which is owned and operated by the Tippecanoe Arts Federation. Located at the heart of the Lafayette-West Lafayette Community at 638 North Street, the building serves as an anchor facility for the state-designated Tippecanoe Arts & Cultural District.

A gift from Dr. Albert Wells to the City of Lafayette in 1926, this building served for many years as the main branch of the Tippecanoe County Public Library. Presently featuring three galleries, the Wells Community Cultural Center is now a hub of art resources and opportunities for the Greater Lafayette Community. In addition to exhibition space, the Wells Building serves as multi-use cultural facility providing area artists and arts organizations with performance, rehearsal, meeting, and storage space. The purpose of the TAF

Galleries is to provide opportunities for artists from north central Indiana to display their original artwork.
